Straw Plaiters Strike in Florence Becoming Serious.

ROME, May 22.—The strike of the straw plaiters in the city and province of Florence is assuming an alarming phase. Thousands of strikers parade the streets, and last evening began hurling stones at the passing carriages and tram-cars. The police interfered and were also stoned by the mob.

PRISON RULES STRICTLY ENFORCED.

Feeling in Cape Town Strong Against the Fifteen Years' Sentence.

CAPE TOWN, May 22.—The ugly feeling among the public here against the imposition of a sentence of fifteen years' imprisonment upon the leaders of the Johannesburg Reform committee who were originally condemned to death is increasing, upon its becoming known that the prison rules are strictly enforced in their cases, and that the condition of the prisoners is unworthy of Kafirs and a positive outrage upon civilization.

Protest Against Senator Morgan's Speech in the Castilian Congress.

NEW YORK, May 22.—A special cable despatch to the Journal from Madrid says: Rafael Gasset, editor and proprietor of Imparcial and a deputy for Havana, protested Thursday in congress against the words of Senator Morgan, as follows: "In a certain parliament dastardly lips have dared to soil our nation with insults, forgetting that Spain is not a weak country when her honor is impugned. In the same parliament a certain individual, not satisfied with that, has dared to insult a lady who is the model of virtue, our queen, who yet weeps with pain over her premature widowhood, and has the heart to feel as her own the troubles of the Spanish nation. These words not having been corrected as they should be, I propose that congress protest against them. I am sure I interpret the sentiment of the whole congress in asking the government to make a protest to the United States."

The president said: "I understand and respect your noble indignation, but am here to enforce a rule of the house forbidding congress to deal with anything save elections until it is constituted. I beg you, therefore, to reserve the protest until congress is formally constituted."

Gassett replied: "Obeying the president's ruling, I renounce at present my request that the government make a protest at what has been said in the American parliament. I am sure the president has been forced to do great violence to his sentiments in not allowing me to continue."

The president said: "I am sure the government will harmonize sentiments of patriotism with the duties of courtesy which must exist between two nations living on friendly terms."

The Independencia Dia, commenting on the incident, says: "Although contrary to the rules of the house, more tolerance on the part of the president would have been regarded with pleasure, because there is impatience for the chambers to refute and answer so many insults which Yankee Senators cast upon Spain."

The cabinet held a meeting yesterday, the queen regent presiding. Senor Canovas reaffirmed the excellent disposition of foreign countries toward Spain, as expressed by the respective governments and the press.

THIRTY-THREE DIVISIONS TAKEN.

Agriculture Rating Bill Forced Through the Commons.

LONDON, May 22.—The House of Commons was still sitting at noon, having been in continuous session since 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Mr. Balfour, the government leader, refused to adjourn until the agricultural rating bill had passed the committee stage. The Radical members moved many amendments to the bill, and these, after discussion, were brought to a vote by closure, with the result of their rejection by an approximate vote of 192 to 61. The clauses were then adopted in their entirety by the same majority. Sir William Harcourt, leader of the opposition, at 7 o'clock this morning protested against Mr. Balfour's high handed use of closure, which he said had been a sinister feature of the conduct of business in the house since the opening of the session. This declaration was received with cheers by the opposition and caused a great uproar among the ministerialist members. Mr. Henry Broadhurst (Liberal) at 9 o'clock this morning asked that the House adjourn for two hours, in order to enable members to get breakfast, the larder of the House of Commons kitchen having become exhausted, but Mr. Balfour refused to agree to this. The attendance of members increased during the forenoon. The amendment to clause 7 was rejected by a vote of 209 to 77, and clauses 7 and 8 were adopted at 1 o'clock.

The House adjourned at 1:30 o'clock. During the sitting thirty-three divisions were taken. When the agricultural rating bill passed the committee, the cheering was loud and long. The adjournment was taken until June 1.

CUT THE WIRES.

Milwaukee Street Cars Stalled and Attacked by Rioters.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 22.—Last night the street railway wires on National avenue were cut in the southern part of the city and nine cars were stalled. The cars were then attacked by rioters. All the windows were smashed with stones and a number of shots were fired into the cars. The attacks were made in a lonely spot and no arrests were made. The company has called upon the city for protection, and all cars will again be guarded by policemen.

Bull Had the Better of the Fight.

NEW YORK, May 22.—A Recorder special from Monterey, Mexico, says: At a bull fight here Wednesday, Jose Mata, a picador, was gored to death, and four other performers, including Silvero Chico, the matador, were dangerously wounded by a vicious bull. The same bull disembowelled and killed six horses.

Farewell Testimonial to a Retiring Priest

MIDDLEBORO, Mass., May 22.—The people of the Church of the Sacred Heart and many personal friends tendered a farewell testimonial to the retiring pastor, Rev. James H. O'Neil, in Grange hall last evening, and presented him with a purse of $1,000. Father O'Neil goes on a vacation to Europe, and will deliver his last sermon in town Sunday, before the Grand Army of the Republic organizations, and will leave next week.

Collided with a Cow.

WATER EVERYWHERE.

The Mississippi and Its Tributaries Far Beyond Their Banks.

ST. LOUIS, May 22.—The Mississippi river is now within three feet of the danger line in front of this city. The river rose nearly two feet during the past twenty-four hours. Already property owners and store keepers are moving their effects to upper floors. Advices received from upper Missouri, Illinois and Iowa points state that all the rivers in these sections are on a rampage and pouring an immense volume of water into the Mississippi. Danger warnings have been issued to all points between Keokuk and Cairo. At Alton the river is out of its banks, and thousands of acres of crops have been destroyed. Throughout Missouri there is no cessation to the downpour of rain, which has continued almost without ceasing since last Sunday. The rainfall thus far exceeds twelve inches. Every river, creek and tributary in the state is overflowing, and in some places the water covers the ground to a depth of two or three feet for a radius of a dozen miles.

Providence Bank to Go Into Voluntary Liquidation.

PROVIDENCE, May 22.—The Traders National Bank is to go into voluntary liquidation, because of a steady decrease of business. Deposits and surplus have shown a large shrinkage of late years. It stands at the foot of the local list of twenty-five active national banks, has a capital of $200,000, and pays a four per cent. dividend. The president is Lewis W. Anthony. It is believed that the stockholders will realize nearly the par value of shares, $50.

This Morning's News.

IMPOSING SPECTACLE.

Czar's Triumphal Entry Into Moscow.

Graphic Description by Sir Edwin Arnold.

Moscow, May 22.—This city never looked so gay and so joyful, not even on the entry of the late Emperor Alexander, as it did yesterday. Moscow has become immensely richer under protection and prohibitive tariffs. The decorations are more extensive and more remarkable. The royal and other visitors are incomparatively more numerous. There is much less restraint. The open windows and balconies have been filled with spectators, on the condition that their names were early announced to the police. It is evident, however, that some precautions were taken, specially chosen men were here and there among the crowds to help the police keep order.

Sir Edwin Arnold, who came to Moscow on behalf of the London Daily Telegraph, in his dispatch to that paper, describing the scene at the Kremlin, exclaims: "Why cannot one write in colors? There was never anything seen on any stage like the living kaleidoscope of fanciful attire, of fantastic hues and embellishments visible around me, particularly in the Oriental element and all the far eastern nations. The officials from Khiva wore magenta colored velvet robes, gold embroidered, and sugar loaf hats. China contributes a dazzling group, with flowered, satin frocks and vermillion buttoned hats. Now a bevy of magnates from Lake Baikal astound the eye, with fur-trimmed brocade and long red boots. Now I recognize the gray surtout and amber cap strings of the Korean, and cry one of them with a greeting, in Japanese. He politely murmurs: "Truly a great day, and we rejoice to be present."

Some of the Khirgiz tartars then appear in yellow silk and scarlet shawls, outdoing all, and at a window of the Gortinnoy Dvor there is a beautiful vision of a Circassian lady in black and orange brocade, glistening with pearls and turquoises. I abandon in despair the poly-chromatic aspects of this point of the pageant.

The Cossacks guard were gorgeously uniformed, and horses with bold and black bandoliers, looking quite fit to pace in front of the czar.

After these came upon the scene almost the chief interest for me personally, since I saw gravely and significantly riding along as the vassal friends of the great white khan, all the chiefs of the Central Asian kingdoms and provinces over which his eagles cast the shadow of their wings. They passed demurely upon noble Arab stallions, the very least among them mounted upon animals covered from crest to haunch with the costliest trappings of silver and gold cloth. Many an Oriental salute was uttered, and many dark hands were reverently folded as these subjugated sovereigns of the East went splendidly, but perhaps sadly, before us.

But these and other parts of the pageant palled before the grand master of ceremonies, borne haughtily onward in such a golden chariot as of old existing in heaven or in classical pictures, holding a wand of gold, tipped with an emerald as big as a walnut. I note that a Catholic archbishop of America has been deprecating the abolition of war by arbitration. He would have been consoled by the spectacle I witnessed in the Red square—a dazzling illustration of the pomp, pride and circumstance of glorious war.

But here at last comes the august object of this unparalleled manifestation the successor and heir of Ivan the Terrible. His handsome and manly young countenance is pale with the prodigious sensation which such a scene must naturally excite, and holds his gloved right hand almost perpetually to his regimental cap. He bends his head gently to this side and that, to acknowledge the boundless welcome. Every man is bareheaded, and every woman is waving a handkerchief or violently crossing his loyal bosom in a prayer for the "little father."

The czarina also sat all alone, dressed wholly in white, even the jewels, pearls and diamonds, seeming to mar by their color the effect of this pure apparel, which caused her to resemble a marble saint within a golden shrine. Most unmistakable was the affection and loyalty of the crowd, and I saw more than one poor peasant woman's eyes fill with tears of sheer joy to behold this fair lady. One honest fellow fell upon his knees to say his prayers, as though he had seen something divine, till a cossack bundled him back into the crowd.

Between 12 and 1 o'clock a few drops of rain fell, but the clouds were soon dispelled by bright sunshine. At 1 p. m., Grand Duke Vladimir, followed by a brilliant suite, traversed the route and, in accordance with Russian military custom, saluted each regiment.

Nothing was lacking to the impressive effect of the procession to the Kremlin, the cortege thus unfolding to the wondering multitudes being majestic and complete in its beauty as well as its magnificence, and embodying every element of imparital splendor. Traversing the streets of holy Moscow, it was seen to the utmost possible advantage. The long array of state carriages, with their princely escorts, the gallant cavalry and all of the appendages of a great imperial court, with the emblems of power and greatness of historic throne, had there a picturesque and appropriate setting.

The Asiatic and other wild races represented in the procession attracted almost as much attention as the czar and czarina. They included Khivans, Eskimos, Finlanders, Poles, Laplanders, Cossacks, Circassians, Georgians, Tartars, Karapapaks, Bashkirs, Tcherkesses, Eaghistanis, Kurds, Chinese, Armenians and others, all in a rich variety of picturesque costumes, distinguished by a variety of infinite colors. These people rode behind the advance guard of police of Cossacks of the guard.

Another striking group was one composed of the servants of the imperial household. They numbered about 60 persons, and wore plumed hats and the richest of court liveries.

The scene last night was a beautiful one. The illuminations were witnessed by unwearied throngs, who do not seem able to have enough of sightseeing.

Never before have the might and majesty of a stupendous empire been so splendidly manifested. No Roman emperor ever enjoyed a more magnificent triumph, and assuredly no modern court pageant has equalled it in its lustre of imperial pomp and blazonry.

A quaint subject of convergation yesterday was that after Wednesday evening's serenade in the courtyard of the Petrovsky palace, the light clouds in the western sky grew into an exact likeness of a great white heraldic eagle, which disappeared in half an hour. The superstitious Russians regard it as an omen of peace and prosperity for the present reign.

OPPOSITION TO PLATT

Will Cause Many New York Delegates to Vote for McKinley.

New York, May 22.—The chief reason for the anger of Platt and his followers over Warner Miller's recent interview is their fear of its effects upon state politics. Platt knows as well as does any one else that he cannot now dictate the course of the New York delegation at St. Louis, and that a considerable part of it will refuse to follow him.

It is looked upon as an omen of the future that the interview has incensed Platt. The leading supporters of McKinley in New York are men who have steadfastly opposed the boss. Some of them at bottom favor McKinley for no other reason than enmity to Platt. At first they seized upon his candidacy as a convenient weapon to fight the boss, and so used it in the state convention. Then, as they saw the increasing sentiment for McKinley in the rank and file of the party, especially in the interior of the state, they recognized in it a means for an attempt to dethrone the boss.

In their view, Platt's opposition to McKinley has gone so far that he and his lieutenants cannot prudently be trusted with the management of the Chloan's campaign, if he is nominated. They claim that McKinley's managers will intrust it to them; and that, after he takes office, they will distribute the federal patronage in New York. With the McKinley league as a working organization, with the confidence of his managers, and with patronage, they believe they can make a better fight against Platt then they have ever made before, and that his followers will gradually desert him. Miller's interview was sort of a concerted signal for this contest, expedited by the undoubted anger of the strict party men in many parts of the state at Platt's bitter campaign aghist McKinley. The Platt crowd tries to disguise its apprehensions, but it is plainly uneasy.

The arrival in this city of William M. Hahn occasioned much speculation yesterday among the Republican managers as to the object of his visit. An incident that occurred at the Fifth Avenue hotel satisfied the politicians that he had come here to have a consultation about the vice presidential nomination.

General Horace Porter, who has been spoken of as McKinley's running-mate on the Republican ticket, entered the hotel and asked for Mr. Hahn. A conference lasting an hour followed, and after General Porter left the hotel, Mr. Hahn started for Canton, O. The crowd of politicians in the state headquarters was sure that Mr. Hahn had made final arrangements with General Porter to take second place on the national ticket. It was asserted by the Platt men, after Mr. Hahn's departure, that the McKinley managers' plans included the nomination of General Porter as vice president and the appointment of Warner Miller as secretary of the treasury, in the event of McKinley's election.

Shortly after the Hahn-Porter conference, another vice presidential boom was launched at the hotel, St. John Gaffney, a McKinley boomer, declared that the choice of the New York McKinleyites for vice president was Cornelius N. Bliss. He said that Mr. Bliss would add strength to the McKinley ticket in the east, and would ensure its election.

Chauncey M. Depew is quoted as follows on Major McKinley's silence on the currency question: "I differ from some of my friends in regard to the position McKinley has taken. I hold that when a man is once in the field it is right and proper for him to keep quiet and let his record speak for itself. Let him put himself in the hands of his friends, and let them do the talking. It is not a man's friends who want him to talk, but his enemies. His friends know where he stands, and he does not need to speak for their benefit. His enemies only seek to make him talk, that they may trip him up."

A report gained currency in Wall street yesterday to the effect that McKinley will come out in a day or two with an announcement that he is directly in favor of a gold standard. The report found many believers, as an immediate rally in the stock market showed. It is significant that in bank circles certain bankers who have all along expressed their dislike for Major McKinley, and their doubts of his position on the currency question, are talking today more in his favor, and some of them say positively that they have information that McKinley will be a firm advocate of sound money, as the term is understood in the street.

Russell Sage came out for McKinley yesterday, by saying that McKinley is as firmly in favor of a gold standard as he is himself. Mr. Sage said that he had taken pains to ascertain directly and for his own information.

Denial From Lauterbach.

New York, May 22.—The regular monthly meeting of the Republican county committee was held last night. Chairman Lauterbach made an announcement, in which he denied having said that "Owing to his quibbling on the money question, if McKinley is nominated at St. Louis, he cannot carry the state of New York, and cannot be elected President of the United States." Mr. Lauterbach said the words attributed to him were misinterpreted.

As Anticipated.

Laramie, Wyo., May 22.—The Democratic state convention was controlled entirely by the free silver element of the party, and adopted a platform of one plank, embodying the most advanced views in favor of that policy.

Feels Positive About It.

Montreal, May 22.—There is a man in Montreal who is willing to swear that Maud C. Williams, the missing heiress, was in Montreal about April 10—he is not quite sure of the exact day—and that he has seen her. The man is Lois Briere, a porter of the Stanley hotel. Briere says she came with a man who was of medium height, and wore a tall hat. Briere expresses the opinion that the girl is hidden away here, and the detectives have offered him $100 to find her.

Young's Curves Were Puzzlers For the Men From the Hub.

Cleveland, May 22.—The Bostons lost principally through the masterly pitching of "Cy" Young, the lanky product of a western hamlet. From the outset the visitors could do nothing with Young.

A Lively Session.

Washington, May 22.—The senate had an hour of much excitement, with a resort to obstructive tactics and several heated personal controversies yesterday. The early portion of the session had been given to the routine of agreeing on conference reports on appropriation bills. At 5 o'clock, Mr. Butler (Pop., N. C.) moved to take up his bill prohibiting the further issue of interest bearing bonds. Mr. Hill immediately moved an adjournment, securing a yea and nay vote, in order to gain time. The motion to adjourn was defeated, whereupon Mr. Chandler followed with a motion for an executive session. For an hour, rollcalls and calls of the senate followed in quick succession. As a further means of delay, Mr. Hill secured the reading of a lengthy conference report which had been presented, and Mr. Chandler secured the reading of several long routine documents sent over from the house. Irritated by these delays, Mr. Allen (Pop., Neb.) accused Mr. Hill of a lack of good faith, to which the New York senator angrily retorted that Mr. Allen's statement was false. The colloquy was brief, but was very sharp and full of feeling. At 6:15, the sergeant-at-arms was directed to go for absent senators. Before this could be executed, however, Mr. Butler yielded for the night.

Hot Times in Commons.

London, May 22.—The house of commons has been discussing the bill providing for the reduction of rates on agricultural land in committee since 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. At 3 o'clock this morning the closure was moved, but several members refused to enter the division lobby, whereupon the speaker summoned and named John Dillon, Dr. Tanner, Daniel Sullivan, David George and John Lewis—the latter two Welsh members, and the others Irish members—for disobeying the chair. Arthur Balfour moved their suspension, which was carried by a vote of 203 to 58. Michael Davitt and Daniel Macalees remained in the house during this division, and were removed by the sergeant-at-arms. Mr. Harcourt thereupon moved to adjourn the debate, as the house was not in a fit condition to continue, but the speaker declined to accept the motion, and the discussion continued.

SCAEGER LIVER.

Your Liver Will Cleanse Your System if It's Kept Well.

Your liver is a storehouse and a scavenger. It stores up digested food for use when wanted. It arrests and throws out dangerous poisons which are trying to get into your circulation.

Indigestion disorders your liver, by creating poisons that paralyze it. Biliousness and other disorders are caused by these and other poisons passing your liver and infecting your whole system.

This is a simple explanation of many disorders which often seem incurable. But they are only incurable because not understood. If you will treat your stomach with Shaker Digestive Cordial, all these disorders will disappear. The cause will have been removed.

Shaker Digestive Cordial is a gentle, vegetable tonic, which aids you to digest your food. It cures the disorders caused by the poisons of undigested food, and prevents your stomach from disordering your liver.

It relieves almost immediately the following symptoms, viz.: headache, dizziness, nausea, mental depression, weakness, lethargy, fever, stomach-ache, bad taste, flatulence, constipation, loss of appetite jaundice, emaciation, general debility, nervousness, neuralgia, offensive breath, anæmia, rheumatism, etc.

It makes you feel well and strong. It cures you when nothing else will.

All druggists. Ten cents for a trial bottle.

WARREN POST'S SOCIAL MEETING.

Geo. G. K. Warren Post, No. 21, Grand Army of the Republic, had another of its pleasant social gatherings last evening, when, in spite of the inclement weather, there was a goodly number present, including members of the post, of the Associates and of Charles E. Lawton Post. The social features included addresses by Past Commander W. S. Bailey and Comrades Overton G. Langley and James H. Taylor of Lawton Post, and brief remarks by President J. W. Horton and B. F. Tanner of the Associates and by Mr. Henry W. Clarke. Mr. Bailey gave a very interesting account of the taking of Morris island, in which he, as a member of the Third Rhode Island heavy artillery, participated, the account being interspersed with incidents and anecdotes concerning himself and his comrades, the recital of which was thoroughly appreciated by all present.

Mr. Tanner, in the course of his remarks, said that he had very recently received the belt which his brother, Thomas Tanner, wore at the battle of Antietam, where he fell within twenty paces of the enemy, completely riddled with bullets. The body was recovered and brought home for burial. The belt had been taken from the body and had fallen into the hands of a man who had kept it for thirty years, always intending, he had said, to give it to Mr. Tanner's relatives, but failing to do so until a few weeks ago. The belt is now highly treasured by Councilman Tanner.

During the evening Commander Milne made reference to the two vacant chairs which ought to represent at the memorial service Sunday the two comrades of the post who had died during the past year, Past Commander and Adjutant Henry T. Easton, and Comrade Cornelius Y. Danaby. After the commander's remarks Mr. George A. Pritchard sang "The Vacant Chair."

Among those present was Chaplain Thomas Nixon, who, on account of poor health, has been absent from the post meetings for several weeks.

Light refreshments were served during the evening, and the members and Associates separated at an early hour, feeling that these social gatherings are not the least pleasing and attractive feature of their post life.

RHODE ISLAND IN CONGRESS.

As a result of the conference between the two houses of Congress on the river and harbor bill, the item of $15,000, for continuing the improvement at Newport harbor, which was reduced by the Senate to $10,000, has been restored. The committee has also agreed upon the provisions for the improvement to the channel in Narragansett bay from Fox Point to the ocean.

The conferees have inserted a new provision directing the Secretary of War to have a preliminary examination made at the inner harbor at Point Judith pond. Congressman Arnold's object in having this provision inserted is to determine the feasibility of reaching Wakefield by way of a breach-way from the Sound to Point Judith pond. The residents of that locality feel assured that the new breakwater now being completed will prevent such a channel from being closed, as it was during the famous September gale some eighty years ago. Government engineers have advised against such an undertaking, but Mr. Arnold hopes their objections may be overcome.

Congressman Bull introduced in the House yesterday a bill granting an honorable discharge to Mathew Logan of Providence, late a private of Battery H, First Rhode Island light infantry. Logan served throughout the war and secured an excellent record, but after the surrender of Lee at Appomattox he indulged too freely in joyous excesses, was placed under arrest and imprisoned for two years, and then dishonorably discharged. Many members of his battery now petition that he be granted an honorable discharge, and Mr. Bull will endeavor to have their request granted. Mr. Bull also introduced a bill granting condemned guns and condemned cannon balls to the Soldiers' Home at Bristol.

A BELL BUOY AT DESPAIR ISLAND.

Notice is given by the lighthouse board that on or about May 25 a bell buoy, painted black, will be established in about eighteen feet of water, about 450 feet ENE., ¼ E. from Despair island, in Narragansett bay, right tangent to Prudence island SSE., ⅝ E.; Conanicut island lighthouse SSW., ¼ W., right tangent to Hope island, W. by S., bearings being magnetic and given approximately.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

—Mr. P. J. Galvin has returned from New York.

ENGLAND'S QUEEN.

Victoria's Seventy-Seventh Anniversary.

Characteristics of a Gracious and Beloved Sovereign.

The twenty-fourth of May is again at hand, and "God Save the Queen" will resound around the world with more than its usual significance, and perhaps with a note of anxiety in it, for the good Victoria, in passing her seventy-seventh mile-stone, marks the completion of a long stage of a journey the period of whose completion no man can fix.

Queen Victoria is unquestionably the best known woman in the world, and her reign has been longer than that of any other living sovereign. Her career has been remarkable in many ways, although it has been for the most part singularly placid.

The queen was born May 24, 1819, at Kensington palace, and was the only child of the Duke of Kent, fourth son of George III. At the time of her birth there seemed to be little prospect that Victoria would ascend the throne, but by strange chance all her father's elder brothers died childless, having this young girl to carry upon her shoulders the responsibility of a nation's welfare. How well she has borne it the years have shown.

Queen Victoria numbers the eighth in a direct line from James I, the intervening space being filled by seven of her kindred. She is fourteenth in descent from Edward VI, twenty-eighth in descent from Henry I, thirty-fifth in descent from Alfred the Great, of time dirision and burned cakes memory; thirty-seventh in descent from Egbert, the first sole monarch of England. A great number of branching lives connect her with other distinguished and illustrious personages of different nationalities.

By reason of the peculiar dearth of offspring that characterized the careers of her royal uncles, the birth of the little girl in the old brick palace in Kensington was a significant event. There was considerable trouble about naming the baby. The father wished to call her Elizabeth, thinking that from its glorious tradition it would prove a name to please the people should she occupy the throne, but the prince regent, who was godfather, together with the emperor of Russia, gave only the name of Alexandrina to the clergy. The father of the little innocent pleaded that another name be added, and proposed the feminine form of the regent's own name, Georgiana. But the regent said that his name could not come in the second place, and as the emperor must take precedence he suggested that if the baby must have another name her mother's should be added. So the child was named Alexandrina Victoria, and in infancy was known as the Princess Drina, a name she dropped after her accession.

A PRETTY CHILD.

Portraits of the queen give evidence that she was a singularly pretty child and had far more than average good looks as a young woman. At the age of nine, according to Fowler's portrait, she was an ideal of a certain type of childish beauty, and that it was not an artist's flattery of his royal patrons is proved by the fact that all the portraits of this period painted by different artists agree closely. She was exceedingly fair, with soft ringlets, clear complexion and bright blue eyes. Nothing ostentatious was allowed her in the way of dress, and, indeed, she never cared for finery of any sort. Attired in a plain muslin frock, straw bonnet with a white ribbon, tiny shoes on her pretty feet, she walked in the palace gardens like any other child. In her rambles she was always accompanied by her German nurse, a page and footman in scarlet keeping at a respectful distance. She was usually a well behaved and punctilliously honest child, and gave the Baroness Lehzen, her governess, very little trouble. In fact, it is said that she often assisted her guardian in laying her own delinquencies before her mother. Daily reports of her conduct were made.

"Once she was somewhat troublesome," said the good German lady.

"No, twice. Don't you remember?" queried the little culprit, brightly holding up her head with an air of pride. She was always faithful of fun of a gentle sort, and was called by her grandmother of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha her "little monkey."

On one occasion, while the little Princess Victoria was walking in the garden, Sir Walter Scott's attention was called to her. He looked at her long and finally said: "This little lady is educated with so much care and watched so closely that no busy maid has a moment to whisper: 'You are heir of England.' I suspect if we could dissect her little heart we should find some pigeon or other bird of the air had carried the matter." This seemed to be the truth, for when the Baroness Lehzen, after the childless death of George IV and the accession of her uncle, old Victoria of her prospects, she showed little or no surprise, but said solemnly: "Now, many a child would boast, not knowing the difficulty. There is much splendor, but there is more responsibility." Then she put her little hand into that of her teacher and said: "I will be good; I will be good!" As this utterance was made before the child was ten years old, it can be regarded as nothing less than marvelous. It is notable, too, that this early declaration of principles has been faithfully lived up to through all the vicissitudes of an unusually protracted reign, for goodness and forbearance have been the marked characteristics of her sovereignty. Her adherence to truth was as pronounced and scrupulous as was that of George Washington, and she was always ready to acknowledge a fault.

HER EARLY TRAVELS.

The royal child accompanied her mother wherever she went, and traveled through England, Scotland and Wales, visiting universities, the iron workers and sailors of her future realm. This was when she was about twelve years old,

THE WITCHERY OF MAY.

Hast felt the thrilling magic, the witchery of May,
What time the young leaves glimmer, and the blossoms wreathe the day?
Hast heard the tender crooning of the south wind in the copse,
And on the roof the silver shower in sudden pattering drops?

Or hast thou, strolling in the lane, seen flowerets at thy feet,
Shy purple-hooded vestals, with fragrance faint and sweet?
Or, on some happy afternoon, in lonely forest nook,
Hast found arbutus waiting for the lover's eager look?

In pulse and vein is witchery, the blitheness of the May;
It chimes in every hurrying brook, in this the robin's lay;
The lilac keeps its secret in every waving plume;
In bird-note 'tis, in greening grass, in branch and bud and bloom.

The residue of the property is left one half each to Mt. Hermon School and the American Baptist Missionary Society. The public bequests are not to be paid until the death of Mrs. Greenleaf.

RAW ECZEMA

NO REST
NO SLEEP
DAY OR NIGHT

My hands were completely covered with Eczema, and between my fingers the skin was perfectly raw. I had to sit with both hands held up, and away from the fire. My husband had to dress and undress me like a baby. I tried the best physicians, but their medicines gave me no relief, and drove me almost crazy. I was advised to try CUTICURA REMEDIES, and did so, although my husband had to go twenty miles to get them. As soon as he got back, I used the CUTICURA, and in five minutes after the first application, I was perfectly easy, and slept soundly all that night. Before I commenced using the CUTICURA REMEDIES I could get no ease night or day. I could not bear to get warm, it would put me in a rage of itching. I always keep the CUTICURA REMEDIES in my house now, and recommend them to everybody, because of their wonderful effect. Yours gratefully,

JURIES AND JURORS.

Our jury system is coming to be sharply criticised, and not without reason. As things go, nothing is more uncertain, no matter what the testimony, than a jury verdict. It is understood in advance that certain classes of litigants, notably corporations, stand little chance of fair play in dealings with individuals, and it is often the case that the preconceived opinions and prejudices of jurymen on general principles, and pathetic appeals on the part of lawyers, have too much to do in determining cases.

Much of this comes from the manner of selecting jurymen, by which incompetent men are often included in the panel. The New York papers are waxing indignant over the fact that it is very hard to get a good jury in that city. The Tribune says that the jury system is being debauched and that it is high time a change was being effected. No change may be needed in the system, but a change is needed in the laws of some of the states which enable so many good citizens to secure exemption from jury service. A change is also needed in the public sentiment that holds jury service to be a hardship instead of a high privilege and duty of citizenship. So long as the men in a community who are most interested in the vindication of the law and the administration of justice avail themselves of every possible quirk to escape serving on a jury, they have no right to complain of the professional jury farce or the miscarriage of justice. They have none to blame for this debauchery but themselves.

And yet it will be found very difficult to bring about a radical change in the system. The principle is sound in theory, and has much to be said in its favor, but as that principle is now applied it fails largely in its application.

TURTLE SOUP IN POLITICS.

A case has recently been decided which has attracted considerable attention. As the story is told, Benjamin Wood of New York evolved a scheme not long ago of sending a ship to the Gulf of Mexico with a crew and an expert cook, to capture green turtles, make them up into turtle soup, seal it in tin cans and bring it to New York to be sold to those who especially relish this epicurean dish. When the first lot of soup arrived by steamer at New York, Collector Kilbreth claimed it must pay a duty. Mr. Wood protested that the soup was an American product and should be entered free. Out of his protest and appeal to the board of general appraisers has grown what is known in the revenue department as the green turtle soup case. The contention of Mr. Wood has been sustained and Collector Kilbreth's decision reversed, and the green turtle soup will hereafter come in untaxed when the turtles are caught by American seamen on American vessels, and the soup is cooked on the high seas and canned in American tin by American workmen. All this has a proper regard for an infant industry; even Major McKinley could not object to it.

This goes to show the mysteries of tariff legislation when the attempt is made to descend to details, and the absurdity of conclusions when people are disposed to strain at gnats and swallow camels. There is surely a better way of levying taxes than this roundabout, inquisatorial and impertinent method. In this case, which is a fair illustration of many others, the question of liability to taxation depended upon where the property was manufactured, where the ship was built which brought it to port, where the men were born who manned the vessel, where the soup was cooked, and where the tin cans were made which contained it—all of which is rather small business for a great nation.

UNSETTLED PROBLEMS.

The Democratic state conventions are declaring for free silver at a rate which is highly suggestive. Everything now depends on Indiana, and it is not quite certain that the "goldits" are fully sure of victory with its help.

Should the national convention declare for free silver there will undoubtedly be a split in the party, precisely the same as in the case of the Republicans on taking similar action. It is scarcely possible that the two wings of either party can stand on the same platform and vote for the same candidates. It would require a peculiar "straddle" to make that possible in any case. Some are of the opinion that such a performance is to be attempted at the St. Louis convention, but if so, it can scarcely command respect.

We do not see how it is possible to keep either party a unit during the coming campaign. The ploughshare of free silverism runs alike through both parties, and a break in one makes a break in the other all the more probable.

If the gold standard men break away from a free silver majority in the Democratic convention, and the free-silver men break away from a "gold bug" majority in the Republican convention, the two will very naturally unite, absorb the Populists and other nondescripts, and make a party of their own for the time being. Such a party would be a lively element in the campaign, and it is not absolutely sure what might be the result. And it may be that such a mongrel party could carry the country, though we think not.

A PILGRIMAGE TO CANTON.

It is a question whether Matthew Stanley Quay has carried the articles of capitulation with him, or gone to Canton simply to make a friendly call. McKinley is an old soldier, and all such admired the demand for "unconditional surrender" as made by General Grant. It should be pretty much that in this case. The allied bosses have fought hard, and Platt's last fusilade having been a complete failure, it is well that he be left in the "last ditch," which appears to be a favorite place of final resort.

Quay and Platt are the two "smartest politicians" perhaps in the country, but they are badly beaten and have the sense to appreciate the fact. Quay came out better than Platt, and one report is to the effect that he now goes to the home of McKinley to intercede for the New York boss, or in other words strike up a bargain through which Platt may be a sharer of the gains of the campaign. If reporters were allowed to be present at the interview there would be some interesting reading in the newspapers about these days.

The Boers make pretty snug work in their proceedings. We read that when Barney Barnato tried to hold a meeting of his mining company in Johannesburg the other day, he had to postpone it indefinitely, because the vice president, four directors, all his lawyers and several other officers were in jail. The company has a capital of hundreds of millions, and employs thousands of men, but they were of no use on that occasion. The meeting couldn't be held, and Barney finds the mining industry terribly depressed. If conspiracies of capital against the state in other countries could occasionally be punctured as the Boers punctured that one, there wouldn't be so much kicking all around.

It is announced that the Manufacturers' Club of Philadelphia has "renewed its declaration in favor of sound money and a protective tariff, and has elected a bi-metallic board of officers. This is good news for the tariffites." That looks like the biggest attempted straddle of the season.

In these days of discussion concerning women the following item is put forward: "None of the older poets has given us a well-known heroine. Chaucer's "Legends of Good Women" and the works of Milton, Dryden, Pope and Cowper contain no woman who stands out in memory."

According to a Washington despatch, Governor Lippitt is decidedly a candidate for Vice President. Of course our Rhode Island people will be glad to see him promoted, and he would be a great improvement on some men who have been proposed for the position.

A New York paper learns that a movement is on foot in Paris and Brussels in favor of a reconciliation of the Armenians with Turkey, which the sultan is said to greatly desire. Probably it will be a case of the lion and the lamb, with the lamb inside the lion.

Colonel T. W. Higginson was known to be the possessor of the most famous library extant about women, and he has just given it to the Radcliffe library. The collection was started in 1846, and two continents were ransacked in the making of it.

It is reported that the czar has already shown his familiarity with political methods by promising a large number of reforms. And it may be he will follow the example of many politicians by forgetting his promises.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church has entered upon its annual meeting at Saratoga and is likely to have an interesting session.

Additions are made to the McKinley band wagon every day, and there are still many waiting to get on board. Quay is on the road to Canton.

Nobody appears to be advocating the annexation of Hawaii in these days. Some time since it was threatened to make it a burning issue.

It was a cold rain, but never mind; it was also wet.

THE USEFULNESS OF THE ROENTGEN RAYS.

The usefulness of the Roentgen rays to the physician as well as the surgeon is becoming more and more evident. A good Crookes tube and the fluorescing screen show practically all the bones of the body, the very transparent lungs, somewhat more opaque heart, and very opaque liver. Professor C. L. Norton reports readily-made diagnoses of tuberculosis, pneumonia, enlarged heart and enlarged spleen; that details of the lower jaw and teeth can be had, but that no notion can be obtained of the texture of the brain. A buckle or pellet of lead is easily detected in any part of the body except the abdomen. For examining the cavities of the head—the antrum, mouth and pharynx—Dr. F. Giezzl of Peruga places a small fluorescent screen in the mouth with the Crookes tube outside, and thus gets very sharp images of foreign bodies, the bones of the face and roots of the teeth.

GOVERNOR LIPPITT AND THE VICE PRESIDENCY.

A Washington despatch says: A tinted lithograph of Governor Charles Warren Lippitt of Rhode Island, accompanied by a biographical sketch announcing his candidacy for Vice President on the Republican ticket for 1896, has been put in circulation in the national capital. It is stated that the gubernatorial election in Rhode Island in April was the first expression of the people of the country prior to the national campaign of 1896. The prominent issue in the Rhode Island campaign was protection, and Mr. Lippitt carried its standard to victory, with the largest plurality that any candidate for governor ever received in the history of the state.

The current number of Harper's Bazar contains several features of unusual interest. Under the head of "Women's College Alumnae Associations," Miss Carolyn Halsted describes the objects and aims of the alumnae of Smith, Vassar, Wellesley, Bryn Mawr, and other colleges for women, showing how unselfish is their ambition, and how generously they plan for educational and philanthropic progress. The article is enriched by a number of portraits. Mrs. Annie Nathan Meyer tells the story of Barnard College from its inception to the present moment. A fine portrait of Dean Smith is given in connection with this paper. A short story of homely feeling, brilliantly told, is "Lizzie Lee's Separation," by Lilian Bell.

CLEVELAND AND PLATT.

The President Interested in the New Yorker's Attack on McKinley.

President Cleveland is greatly interested in the attack that is being made on Major McKinley by Platt. According to the opinion of most observant public men, the tendency of this attack is to make Cleveland a candidate for the Democratic nomination. Mr. Cleveland would like to combine free trade with the gold standard as an issue in the campaign, and the attack of Mr. Platt on Major McKinley is said to inspire him with the idea that the gold men in New York may be made so suspicious of the Ohio man that many of their votes might be combined with those of the mugwumps and free traders, so as to carry the state if he (Cleveland) were the Democratic candidate.

The leading Democrats are satisfied that Cleveland wants the nomination under certain conditions; it is pretty certain, too, that he thinks he sees in Platt's attack on McKinley the prospect of the desired conditions developing. There is no man more distasteful to the free traders than is McKinley. Cleveland's friends calculate that even the silver men who are also free traders would support Cleveland as against McKinley. They therefore view with great satisfaction the attempt of Mr. Platt to discredit the Ohio candidate among the New York financiers. This course of Mr. Platt's is regarded as directly in the interest of Mr. Cleveland's candidacy, as a menace to the Republican national ticket in New York state. Whether Mr. Cleveland has any information as to Mr. Platt's plans, or whether he merely draws inferences from surface indications, is not known; but every utterance of the New York boss designed to cast doubt upon the soundness of McKinley's financial views is regarded as in the interest of Mr. Cleveland.

If the gold men could control the Democratic national convention and nominate Cleveland, the idea of the campaign would be to attack McKinley on finance in New York and the rest of the eastern business centres, and to attempt to hold the Democrats together by denouncing McKinleyism in the South. What grounds there may be for the theory that Platt would lend himself, directly or indirectly, to a fight against McKinley in New York after the nomination no one is prepared to say, but the Cleveland people evidently feel that Platt is burning his bridges as he goes.

None of the politicians in Washington doubt for a minute that Mr. Platt realizes, as well as do other people, that McKinley's nomination is practically assured, and his attack is looked upon, therefore, as equivalent to an attack on the Republican nominee. Looked upon in this light, Mr. Platt's course is puzzling to the Republicans unless it means that his antagonism is so great that he would be willing to sacrifice his party, as far as it lies in his power, in order to strike a blow at McKinley. He has gone far beyond anything that Quay would sanction, and the result is a break between them. McKinley's friends say that there is no possibility of Platt's being invited to Canton, and that if he seeks a conference with McKinley it will not lead to the making of any terms. They have no fear, they say, of anything he can do, before or after the nomination at St. Louis.

It is said that Senator Quay, having disapproved of Mr. Platt's plans as likely to be injurious to the Republican party, proposes to attempt to counteract what the New Yorker has said about McKinley's financial position. It is expected that on his return from Canton Mr. Quay will make a formal announcement that there is no ground at all to criticise McKinley's position on the financial question and that there is no reason in the demand for an explicit declaration on the subject. This announcement on the part of Mr. Quay will be expected to be followed at the proper time by the declared candidacy of Governor Hastings for Vice President.—[Washington Star.

A UNIQUE BRIDAL GIFT.

A beautiful and unique bridal gift that lately came to an American bride is a three-yard square of white linen nearly covered with drawn work and rich embroidery done in gold-colored silk. The design for the cloth is the work of Professor Tempeky of Vienna, one of the most noted designers of the world. The embroidery itself was done by ninety young needlewomen who live in little hamlets among the mountains of Bohemia. The millions of stitches upon the cloth were the leisure hour occupation of three years, and were done as a labor of love after the day's work of stitching was over.

The design of the cloth extending from the centre shows first a knot of the gold-colored silk surrounded by a cobweb of drawn work, beyond which there are long narrow linen points on which small flowers are worked. Then there is a circle of linen worked with French knots and having the edges finished in button-hole stitch. Next there is a mass of solid embroidery, in which every known stitch is said to be used to carry out the varied design. Beyond this there are other borders, combining drawn-work and embroidery. The finest work is on a band about two feet from the edge of the cloth. The edge itself has a hem six inches wide, with a narrow border of drawn-work next it.—[New York Post.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, May 22, 8 A. M.—For Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut—Continued unsettled weather, with showers and warmer tonight; Saturday, generally fair and cooler; southerly winds, becoming northerly.

FOR BOSTON AND VICINITY.

BOSTON, May 22, 8 A. M.—For Boston and vicinity—Fair tonight and Saturday; cooler Saturday night; west to northwest winds.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

The conditions which caused the light rains in southern New England and the Middle states have nearly passed off the coast, and with the exception of local rains at a few stations in the interior of the country, today's weather is fair. Threatening clouds, however, continue in the Middle states and the lake regions, and scattered clouds also prevail throughout the Southern and Western states, there being but few localities having clear skies this morning. The temperatures have risen about ten degrees in the lower lake region, and are rising rapidly thence eastward to the coast. They have fallen correspondingly in the upper lake region and upper valleys, and are as low as from 35 to 40 degrees around Lake Superior. New England skies continue generally cloudy. At Nantucket the amount of precipitation was 1.05 inches; elsewhere in the district the rainfall was very light.

BAPTIST ANNIVERSARIES.

Session of the Missionary Union Attracting Great Interest.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., May 22.—The second of the Baptist anniversaries, that of the American Baptist Missionary Union, was begun today at 10 o'clock in the auditorium. The union is in its eighty-second year, and the attendance and interest shown by Baptists from all parts of the United States makes this one of the most memorable conventions in its history.

A prayer meeting led by Rev. E. E. Chivers, D. D., of New York preceded the business session. The president of the union, Henry F. Colby, D. D., of Dayton, Ohio, called the session to order at 10 o'clock. His address was an exhortation to increased activity in missionary work. The usual committees were appointed and the report of the executive committee was presented by the foreign secretary, S. W. Duncan. The report says:

The debt has been reduced more than $50,000. The Chinese war, the Armenian troubles and the threatened war cloud on our own horizon have been an affliction to all Christendom and have chilled philanthropic feeling. The financial outlook has also tended to still further quench the spirit of benevolence. When the government is compelled to borrow money for its running expenses, what wonder is it that a foreign missionary society should be compelled to report its debt—$103,828—still unpaid. The total amount of legacies received during the year is $189,101, the largest ever received by us. Last year the donations amounted to $356,920, but we need a full half million every year, or else must beat a deliberate retreat. The total receipts were: From donations, $205,920.20; legacies, $189,101.02; from other sources, an amount bringing the total up to $401,598.32. The total expenditures were $450,836.95. Debt, April 1, 1895, $103,927.63.

BEFORE THE SENATE.

Bill Prohibiting Bond Issues Without the Consent of Congress.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Immediately after the opening prayer in the Senate today, Mr. Butler (Pop., N. C.) moved to proceed to the consideration of his bill prohibiting the issue of United States bonds without the consent of Congress, and the motion was agreed to: Yeas, 34; nays, 20.

The vote in detail on the motion to take up the bill was as follows: Yeas—Messrs. Allen, Bacon, Bate, Berry, Blackburn, Brown, Butler, Chilton, Cockrell, Daniel, Dubois, George, Heansbrough, Harris, Jones (Ark.), Kyle, Martin, Mills, Mitchell (Ore.), Pasco, Peffer, Perkins, Pettigrew, Pritchard, Pugh, Shoup, Stewart, Teller, Thurston, Turple, Vest, Warren, White and Wilson—34.

Nays—Messrs. Allison, Baker, Burrows, Cullery, Chandler, Davis, Frye, Gallinger, Gray, Hale, Hawley, Hill, Lindsay, McBride, McMillin, Morrill, Nelson, Sherman, Vilas and Wetmore—20.

Mr. Hill took the floor, after the second partial conference report on the Indian appropriation bill had been taken up and agreed to and a further conference asked. Mr. Hill said the crime, the alleged crime, of 1873 is nothing compared to the crime which will be perpetrated if this act shall pass the present Congress and become a law. Stripped of all its verbiage, condensed as it is, it is a bold proposition for the repeal of the resumption act of 1875; for the repeal of the only provision of law that exists for the maintenance or redemption of the paper currency of the country. It does not, in so many words, repeal the law of 1875; but it is, in effect, a repeal of that law. It is a startling proposition. It will not solve the silver question. It will not solve the financial question. It simply embarrasses the government. It simply puts in peril the finances of the country. It is a measure in the wrong direction. It was boldly avowed yesterday by its author and sponsor as a Populist measure. Let there be no misunderstanding about it; it is an avowed Populist measure.

COMMITTEE CHAIRMANSHIPS.

Important Appointments by the Presbyterian General Assembly.

SARATOGA, N. Y., May 22.—The Presbyterian General Assembly began business promptly this morning at 9:30 o'clock, Moderator Withrow in the chair. The most important matter of the day was the announcement of the standing committees, which he made up last night in a long conference with the stated and permanent clerks of the assembly. Dr. Booth, as retiring moderator, is at the head of the bills and overtures committee, with Dr. Agnew of Philadelphia as the second man. Dr. Agnew, on account of Dr. Booth's indisposition, will perform the duties of chairman. Dr. Breed, the leading candidate of the opposition, should stand at the head of the judicial committee, the second in importance in the assembly, but as some cases before this committee come from Dr. Breed's locality, he is placed at the head of the theological seminary committee. Dr. Montford, third man in the roster for moderator, is named as chairman of the judicial committee. Dr. Davies, moderator of Dr. Withrow, is put down as chairman of the committee on church polity.

BELIEVED TO BE A TRAMP.

Unidentified Steamer Pulled Off the Romer Shoal.

NEW YORK, May 22.—When the dense fog which had prevailed in the lower bay and off the coast during the night had partly cleared away this morning the observer at Sandy Hook discovered a steamer near the end of the Romer Shoal, apparently anchored. Later a tug came near her, and was seen to pass a hawser to her over the steamer's stern, which indicated that she was aground. The steamer's name could not be made out up to 10 o'clock.

The steamer aground at Sandy Hook is supposed to be a tramp. She is schooner-rigged and has a red stack with black top. She has no flags. At 10:30 o'clock tug Timmins began pulling on the steamer, which was working her own propeller, but as yet without apparent success. Two wrecking steamers have passed, bound in the direction of the stranded vessel.

Later—The steamer was pulled off by tug Timmins at 12:30 p. m.

FIRE AT CRESCENT PARK.

Dance Hall and Cafe Destroyed, and Dining Halls Scorched.

PROVIDENCE, May 22.—A fire broke out this morning at the summer resort known as Crescent Park, on Narragansett bay. A large dance hall and cafe were destroyed, and the large dining halls were scorched. The fire was of incendiary origin. The loss is about $5,000.

Epidemic of Crime Among Waterbury Italians.

WATERBURY, Conn., May 22.—Three Italians were this morning held in bonds of $300 each, charged with participating in the stabbing affray last night. An epidemic of crime appears to have broken out among the lower element of the local Italians, similar to that which resulted in several murders two years ago.

BRITANNIA TODAY.

Winner in the Match Race of the Royal Thames Yacht Club.

LONDON, May 22.—The match races of the Royal Thames Yacht Club began at Gravesend today, over the same course as that sailed yesterday, from the lower Hope, around the Mouse lightship, and return to Gravesend, fifty miles, the second class yachts cutting off five miles by rounding the West Oaze buoy instead of the Mouse lightship. There was a moderate southwest breeze, but the sky was dull. The Britannia, Satanita and Altea had their sheets flowing in going to Mouse light. The starters in the small-rater class were the Niagara, the Saint and the Penitent.

The race for the large-raters was won by the Britannia, with the Satanita in second place and the Altea third.

Tide Ebbing and Flowing Through Schooner Lewis Jane.

CHATHAM, Mass., May 22.—Schooner Lewis Jane, from Hoboken, before reported aground on "Crossing Over," at the entrance to this harbor, remains in the same position, and the tide ebbs and flows through her. The cargo is being discharged into lighters.

Death of Ex-Senator Wallace of Pennsylvania.

NEW YORK, May 22.—Ex-United States Senator William A. Wallace of Pennsylvania died this morning at 150 West Eighty-eighth street in this city. Mr. Wallace had been seriously ill for several months, and for a month past had been unconscious for the greater part of the time.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

—Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Drexel have returned to New York.

—The district court did no criminal business today, and had none at its Tiverton session.

—Rev. J. H. Allen will preach at the First Methodist Episcopal Church Sunday evening on "Literary Aspects of the Bible."

—F. A. Lloyd, L. Hoffman and Eugene Van Ness of New York; George Adams of Bangor, H. S. Pike of Syracuse and G. W. Larkham of Providence are at the Perry House.

—Tuber Lyceum, No. 734, Lyceum League of America, is to keep open house on Election day. The lyceum is in a flourishing condition and new members are being initiated at nearly every meeting.

—It is reported here that the New York firm of Dresser & Goodridge has been dissolved, presumably on account of the recent financial difficulties of the E. R. Goodridge Manufacturing Company.

—Weecut Shassitt Tribe of Red Men will meet this evening, to make arrangements for attending the funeral of the late William P. Lyon. This is the third death among the members of the tribe within two weeks.

—Agents of the Fall River line have been notified that the increase in fares and the change from limited to unlimited tickets on the various steamers will take place June 1. The double service will be inaugurated June 27.

—The Rogers High School base ball team was to play in Fall River tomorrow, but the Fall River High Schools cancelled the game. The New Bedford league team will play in Fall River tomorrow, and the boys could probably not secure the grounds for the school game.

—A young woman lost her pocket-book in a sewer yesterday, and said that there was money and a diamond ring in it. A rake was procured, and after a long while the pocket-book was rescued. The money was there, but the ring was only a ruse for some one to exert himself to procure the missing purse.

THE MUSICAL JUBILEE.

The rehearsals for the coming musical jubilee, under the direction of Professor Fredericks, are progressing very satisfactorily, especially the boys' chorus in "Tommy Atkins" and "The Sailor Free." Mr. Fredericks has arranged interesting features in the allegory of songs, which opens with Keller's "American Hymn" by the chorus of three hundred voices, followed by "The Red, White and Blue, or Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," in costume. The three principals are Master Jones of St. John's choir, as Uncle Sam; Miss Florence Carley and Miss Clara King, as Columbia. A specialty is here introduced by a chorus of sixty boys, headed by Masters Ellis and Bowen of St. John's choir. The allegory will conclude with the "Star Spangled Banner," with Miss Hattie J. Hayes as the soloist. At the conclusion of the last verse and chorus, there will be a tableau and the firing of cannon, twenty-five persons participating in the tableau, "The Army and Navy," with Miss Bertha Eddy as the Goddess of Liberty.

JAMESTOWN.

[Regular correspondence of the News.]

Mr. William Bryan, landscape gardener, who has charge of that line of work on the property of the Jamestown Land Company, has gone to New York.

Miss Alice Cottrell is at home from Wheaton Seminary for a few days.

Mr. C. T. Knowles, proprietor of the Bay View Hotel, is confined at home by illness.

Mr. Charles Wharton of Philadelphia visited his summer place here today.

A new floor is being laid in the store of Mr. C. F. Frasch.

Colonel F. V. Greene of New York and family are expected to arrive at the Howland house tomorrow morning.

Mr. R. J. Easton was on the island today, staking out the property of Mr. James Hopkins on Greene lane.

A special town meeting was held this afternoon for the purpose of authorizing the town treasurer to hire $20,000 for the purchase of a new steam ferry-boat. Eleven voters were present, and the polls were open twenty minutes, the result being a unanimous vote in favor of the proposition.

AT "MAYCROFT."

Much More Damage by Water Than by Fire.

An alarm of fire was rung in from box 52, at the corner of Bellevue and Narragansett avenues, at 12:30 o'clock this noon, for a fire in the cottage of Mr. Lispenard Stewart on Bellevue avenue, next north of the C. C. Baldwin cottage. The flames had been extinguished before the department arrived, and the only damage by fire was a few half-charred floor beams in the cellar. But as a result of the fire the building was quite seriously damaged, water being the immediate cause.

The cottage is known as "Maycroft," and was occupied several summers ago by Governor Henry W. Ladd. Mr. Stewart purchased it last summer, and early last fall began extensive alterations and additions. The contractors have been at work during the winter, and were today engaged on the interior finish. Contractor M. A. McCormick did the woodwork and had the oak floors laid, the joiner work well along and the ceilings covered with canvas and painted, all ready for the oil finish. During the winter he had used two large hot-air furnaces to dry the plastering and make the house habitable, and had left the furnaces in good condition. A gang of painters, engaged by a New York contractor, was employed in the building this morning, and to aid their work had started the fires in the two furnaces, and apparently left them burning with full force. At noon they retired to one of the rooms up stairs, and were quietly eating dinner when they were aroused by the cries of several women who were down stairs. The women had noticed that the house was becoming unusually hot, and soon discovered that the rooms were filling with smoke. The men rushed to the cellar, where they found a quantity of rubbish on one of the furnaces blazing briskly, and the floor beams in a lively blaze. Some of them ran to the hose pipe in the cellar, but in their haste turned the water into the pipes which lead about the building. The plumbing, which had been entirely changed, was not completed, and none of the fixtures were in place. In consequence, the water had free vent, and flowed in streams all over the house, upon floors, joiner work and ceilings. The wood was in a very receptive condition for the water, having no oil upon it, and the flood soon began to swell joints and blister the ceilings, undoing a large amount of the work of the carpenters. The fire, which was confined to the cellar, and the flood were stopped at about the same time.

The furnaces could not be reached for some time on account of the great heat within them, and when the doors were opened the coals were found to be at a white heat. The air of the whole house was superheated, and only a few minutes more would probably have been needed to start the whole building into a blaze.

DIPLOMATIC SPARRING.

Correspondence Between Secretary Olney and the German Abassador.

BERLIN, May 22.—The official correspondence exchanged last autumn between Secretary Olney and Baron Von Thielmann, German ambassador to the United States, regarding the case of Louis Stern of New York, who was sentenced to fourteen days' imprisonment for insulting Baron Von Theungen, deputy commissioner of the Spa at Kissingen, was published yesterday. Mr. Stern's sentence was revoked by a proclamation of amnesty promulgated by the prince regent of Bavaria, whereupon Mr. Stern, who had forfeited his bail of 80,000 marks by his failure to appear and serve his sentence, lodged a claim for the return of the bail money, which claim was not allowed. Mr. Olney denounced the forfeiture of the bail and the arbitrary sentence of imprisonment as unnecessary and unjust. Such incidents, he said, must produce an estrangement between the two countries. Baron Von Thielmann replied sharply, denying Mr. Olney's right to criticise the action of the Kissingen court or to otherwise discuss the administration of justice in Germany. The ambassador directed Mr. Olney to address any further communication he desired to make to the German government through the American embassy at Berlin. Mr. Olney replied to this communication, upholding the right of every state to criticise the action of foreign tribunals when its own subjects were concerned. He maintained his freedom to choose how he should make his communications to the German government. In reply Baron Von Thielmann demurred to the grounds taken by Mr. Olney. Nothing further on the subject is published.

ONLY THE GOVERNMENT STORY.

Later Advices Awaited Regarding Wednesday's Fighting.

HAVANA, May 22.—The engagement which was reported unofficially Wednesday took place at Motembo, in the province of Matanzas. The rebels made three attacks upon the Spanish troops, who were commanded by Colonel Molina, but were repulsed each time. The insurgents, who formed part of Gomez's vanguard, were commanded by Collazo, Zayas and others. It was their intention to encircle the Spanish column, but the bravery of the troops prevented them from carrying out the manœuvre. The rebel loss was ten killed and more than twenty wounded. The troops lost one killed and ten wounded. Only the government report of the fight has been received, and later advices may put an entirely different aspect on the engagement. It is stated on good authority that an important expedition has landed safely near Manzanillo, in the province of Santiago de Cuba.

British Steamer Ashore at Montreal.

MONTREAL, May 22.—British steamer Amaryuthia, while leaving port yesterday, went ashore off Longue Pointe. Lighters and tugs went to her assistance, but it is expected that many tons of cargo must be discharged before she can be floated. The Amaryuthia was bound for Glasgow with a general cargo and six hundred head of cattle.

Coal Schooner a Total Wreck.

CHARLOTTETOWN, Prince Edward's Island, May 22.—Schooner Amy B., laden with sixty tons of coal, from Chatham, New Brunswick, went ashore on Trion shoals and is a total wreck. The crew were saved.

A QUALITY MOST DESIRED.

Among the qualities most to be desired in a young girl's character is a high sense of honor. I wish I could impress on every reader the need of being always above every thing petty or small, so that one would not for a single moment ever be tempted to do a mean or underhand thing, to speak unkindly of a friend, or to repeat a conversation which was confidential.

It may happen to you, for instance, to be visiting in the home of a relative or friend where there may be a little friction at the table, or where some anxiety arises about the course of a member of the family. No matter what you see or hear, in such circumstances you are bound, if you are an honorable person, to be silent about it, neither making comments nor looking as if you could tell something if you choose, nor in any way alluding to what is unpleasant, at any future time. A guest in a home cannot be too careful to guard the good name of those under its roof, for it is an honor to be a guest, in the first place, and honor is demanded in return.

Again, a nice sense of honor in matters connected with money is very important. Polly is treasurer of a society, and has the care of the funds. She must never for an instant, or in an emergency, lend these funds to other people, or borrow them for her own use. I knew a girl—Polly was her name, by the way—who was induced, being treasurer of a certain guild, to lend her brother, for one day, the money she had in her care. The brother was older than Polly, and a very persuasive person. He said: "Why should you hesitate? I'll bring it back to you tonight, and it will oblige me very much if I can take that fifty dollars and pay a bill I owe before noon today." Foolish Polly permitted her scruples to be over-ruled. The money was not brought back, and but for her father's kindness in making it good she would have been disgraced as a dishonest treasurer. She told me long afterwards that the lesson had been burned in on her mind never to take liberties with money which she held in trust.—[Harper's Round Table.

CLEAR COURSE FOR YACHTS.

An act approved by the President yesterday "to provide for the safety of passengers on excursion steamers," had its inception in the complaint made by Lord Dunraven of the crowding of the Defender-Valkyrie regatta course. Hereafter there will be no opportunity for excursion steamers and other vessels to interfere with aquatic sports. The text of the act is:

That, in order to provide for the safety of passengers on excursion steamers, yachts, oarsmen, and all craft, whether as observers or participants, taking part in regattas, amateur or professional, that may hereafter be held on navigable waters, the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered, in his discretion, to detail revenue cutters to enforce such rules and regulations as may be adopted to insure the safety of passengers on said excursion steamers, yachts, oarsmen, and all craft, whether as observers or participants taking part in such regattas."

"Ten people out of a dozen are invalids," says a recent medical authority. At least eight out of these ten, it is safe to allow, are suffering from some form of blood-disease which a persistent use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla would be sure to cure. Then, don't be an invalid.

ENGLAND'S QUEEN.

an attractive little girl, half smiling, half serious, interested in everything, and yet decorously deferring to her elders and waiting patiently to be told of things rather than allowing her curiosity to prompt her to tedious queries.

A few years pass, and the small, graceful, willowy princess, interested in literature, art, needlework and household affairs, is taken from the hands of her governess and placed in the care of lords and dukes to be educated in constitutional law.

A little later, and the royal maiden met for the first time the youth to whose love in after-time heaven had surely allotted her. Young Albert came over from the little German court at Coburg with his brother Ernest, and the two boyish princes found the expectant young Princess Victoria at the head of the grand staircase at Windsor castle, smiling and ready to give them a royal welcome. There was a happy vacation time spent by these three cousins, and when the two boys returned to their studies at the University of Bonn a significant emerald ring, with a diamond in the centre, sparkled on Victoria's pretty hand. Here was the real love-making of these two, for their subsequent betrothal was a mere state formality over which Cupid yawned, his work already well accomplished.

The impression made upon Victoria by this young German prince is clearly evidenced in a letter which she at about this time wrote to her uncle Leopold, who thus far had accomplished a long desired union between two intimate families of Coburg. "I hope and trust that all will go on prosperously in this matter," she wrote; "and that you will take good care of Albert's health." It is easy to see that a sentiment a great deal softer than cousinly solicitude is contained in that closing injunction.

June 20, 1837, just after her eighteenth birthday, this modest maiden, by the death of William, was thrust into the white light of supreme authority. It was a portentous occasion, almost a pathetic one, but the sterling qualities of the young queen shone forth steadily in spite of the trepidation which the suddenness of the summons and the informal method of its conveyance occasioned her, for there was a memorable lack of ceremony attending the bringing of the message which called the timid girl.

HOW SHE RECEIVED THE MESSAGE.

The archbishop of Canterbury and the lord chamberlain carried the news of the old king's death to Kensington palace, and were told that the princess was asleep and must not be disturbed. Then the archbishop made the first statement of her new position: "We have come on business of state to the queen," he said; "and she must be roused even from sweet sleep for that."

The news being conveyed to her uncrowned majesty, she at once gave a lesson to all women forever not to keep men of business waiting. She came at once into the room, her night-cap cast aside and her hair loosely coiled, and with only a shawl over the white night-robes she wore, her feet hastily thrust into bedroom slippers. Her large, sympathetic eyes were full of tears, but she was, we are informed, collected and dignified. The first words she uttered were a request to the archbishop: "I ask your prayers in my behalf."

At this time the queen was a very sweet-looking young woman, with fair hair, large blue eyes and rosy cheeks, in which the blushes came and went in a manner charming to behold. Above all, her appearance was fresh and wholesome. She is said to have been deeply embarrassed when her elderly uncles had to kneel and swear allegiance to her on her accession.

One of the first acts of her reign showed the goodness of her heart. She wrote a letter of condolence to her widowed aunt, queen consort of William IV, and addressed it, as usual, to "Her Majesty the Queen." One of her attendants called her attention to what was supposed to be her mistake, and remarked that her relative was now "queen dowager." "I know that," responded the young queen, "but she shall not first receive her altered title from my hand."

THE FIRST YEARS OF HER REIGN.

In the year of her accession to the throne England was still under the influence of the eighteenth century, and the beginning of Victoria's reign marked the birth of a new era, one of intellectual progress and development. The more noteworthy events of the early years of her reign are signs of the new civilization which was to come—the rebellion in Canada, the Anti-Corn Law league, the Chartist agitation, the Jamaica question, Irish affairs, the Afghan war, the war with China. At home England was working toward a larger measure of political freedom; abroad it was pushing on to conquest and absorption, laying the foundations of the greater Britain. Wars with Russia, Persia and China followed, and in 1858 came the great Indian rebellion, which in the end gave to England her eastern empire. A subsequent and less important result was the queen's assumption of the title of empress of India.

THE YOUNG QUEEN IN LOVE.

But, to return more directly to the personal affairs of this young monarch, let us turn to that part of her existence which was the fountain of her deepest joy, and which years after became the shrine of her greatest grief—her love for Albert. This was a deep and true affection, and the regard in which she was held by the young student at Bonn was no less strong and tender. But the course of this true love, while it ran smoothly enough, at last was apparently about to be dammed up forever near its source, for both Victoria and Albert realized that a proposal of marriage made by a minor German prince to the queen of England would be inadmissible. Furthermore, they knew that some of the queen's near relatives would not look with great favor upon such an alliance. But these considerations only drew them closer to each other. The way out of this dilemma was not hard to find, however, for a queen's life is one long continuous round of leap years, and tender propositions having a matrimonial intent may not only be made by her, but the question may be popped decorously and even delicately. It is said that the maiden monarch approached the subject by asking her cousin if he liked England.

"Very much," answered the youth from over the Rhine.

"Then why should you ever leave it?"

Young Albert's answer is not a part of history, but it may be inferred that it was in harmony with the question, for it was only a short time thereafter that the queen wrote a long letter to her Uncle Leopold, telling him some great news, and on the same day carried with her to a meeting of her cabinet council a portrait of her betrothed in a bracelet. This she showed to her learned counselors, at the same time bravely announcing her matrimonial intentions. Subsequently she did the same to the full parliament.

Whatever may have been the private feelings of her advisers and other members of her court, no outspoken objection was made, and so it came about that on a cold and rainy day, February, 1840, a pretty, slight, pale bride, buried in satin and lace, in the royal chapel of St James, gave her heart and herself to a whole-souled, intelligent German prince. From the long list of royal marriages which have not been princely in their happiness this one stands out white, pure and sunlit. Husband and wife remained through life what they had been almost

A large percentage of the world's waste lies in the use of articles made to SELL.

Such goods are showy, perhaps, but they soon wear out, and so are wasteful and costly to their buyers.

THE SOCIETY WHEEL FOR 1896 IS THE OLYMPIC.

Ours have arrived, but we would suggest if you wish to ride one of these high class wheels that you order now and so avoid the rush which is sure to come. The Olympic is RIDDEN BY RULERS as well as by people of more humble birth, who wish to avoid the annoyance of punctured tires and a long walk home with a useless wheel to be carried.

The Olympic is a high grade wheel, and is fitted with self-healing tires which will prove a great boon to wheelmen.

Other new wheels from $40 up. Also a complete supply of bicycle sundries. Repairing in all its branches at lowest rates. Wheels to let.

This Morning's News.

WHAT WOULD FOLLOW

Should the Ottoman Empire be Suppressed by Great Powers?

Williamstown, Mass., May 22.—The first contest of the Dartmouth-Williams debating league was held here last evening, and resulted in a victory for Dartmouth. The question was, "Resolved, That the general welfare demands the suppression of the Ottoman empire by the European powers." Williams was represented by John W. Beckes, Damon E. Hall, H. Horace G. Brown. Dartmouth's speakers were Frederick B. Eaton, George A. Greene and Craven Laycock. Professor Bascom of Williams college presided, and the decision of the debate was left to Judge Herrick of the New York supreme court, Melvin O. Adams, president of the Dartmouth Alumni, and Judge Dunbar of the Massachusetts superior court. In upholding the affirmative of the question, the Williams men had to shoulder the burden of proof, and they fought hard, but Dartmouth was relentless in her demand for a substitute for the present condition of affairs in case the Turk should be suppressed. The contest was a close one, as was shown by the air of doubt prevailing in the audience until Judge Herrick gave the decision. Dartmouth won through the calm, practical arguments of her speakers, who laid particular stress on the maintenance of the status quo.

John W. Beckes, in opening the debate, said the complete and permanent overthrow of the Ottoman empire was demanded for the welfare of Ottoman subjects, and for the general welfare. Here was a government of 21,830,000 people, of which the Turks, constituting not more than one-fourth, excluded all others from participation. The only way was to strike at the root of the evil, and that meant suppression.

Mr. Eaton said united action by the European powers for the suppression of Turkey was an utter impossibility. In regard to the Turko-Armenian question there was more falsehood than fact floating about. The Turks were not directly responsible for the Armenian massacres. They had been set on foot by Armenian revolutionists and their foreign sympathizers. A large share of the responsibility should also be placed on the European powers, who had always been meddling with the affairs of Turkey.

Mr. Hall said there were four possible solutions to the problem. First, to wait for the Turks to institute reforms; second, for Europe to propose reforms; third, for Europe to force reforms upon the empire, and fourth, those failing, suppression. The first proposal was absurd, because the Turk had had 800 years to alleviate the condition of his subject races, and had never done so. As to the second propositon, the Ottoman government had repeatedly made promises of reforms, and had failed to keep them. Hence, suppression was the only proper measure.

Mr. Green said the congress of Berlin, composed of the greatest diplomats in Europe, had decided the question upon which the debate was being held. The congress was held right on the heels of the so-called Bulgarian outrages, and there was no hint of suppression. The speaker held that the same conditions held true today, and quoted Lord Salisbury to support his position. Even granting that the general welfare demanded the suppression of the Ottoman empire, the concert of the European powers for that purpose was impossible.

Mr. Brown took the position that suppression should be done by the European powers. This should be done by a congress of the powers. This plan had been successfully tried, the congress of Vienna in 1814 and the congress of Berlin in 1878 being cited. As for the plan of partition that could be easily arranged. If Russia was granted a protectorate over Turkey in Asia, excepting Palestine and the borderland of the Red sea; if England had Egypt, Cyprus, Palestine and the above mentioned borderland of the Red sea, the only sound claims of both would be satisfied. Constantinople could remain free to the commerce of all nations under the protectorate of Bulgaria.

Mr. Laycock argued there was some extenuation for the porte's broken promises of reform. Most of the promises had been literally extorted from him. If Turkey should be suppressed, what then? Should Russia, with its mammoth strength and diminutive conscience control, or should England claim the right to govern, thus precipitating a general European war? The speaker closed with a summary of the arguments adduced by the Dartmouth debaters.

After the debate a reception was tendered the visitors, which was attended by the judges, the Williams faculty, the Dartmouth and Williams baseball teams and the leaders in the several college organizations.

Ice Everywhere.

St. John's, N. F., May 22.—The ice-float extends in all directions as far as the eye can reach. Steamer Barcelona, from Liverpool, encountered the first ice 180 miles off the coast. She reports that the ocean is covered with monster icebergs, some of them being over a mile long.

ENGLAND'S QUEEN.

from their first meeting—lovers. They sang and played together, Albert being a strong and skillful organist and a musical composer of no mean order. While his prime position was that of confidential and most influential and trusted adviser to the queen, he was loved and revered as husband and father and known as the blameless prince.

VICTORIA AS WIFE AND MOTHER.

And now we come to that portion of the life of this great queen which brought out most signally her noblest traits of character, for it was as wife and mother that her greatness found its highest expression. In her devotion to her husband she was a model to every wife in the world, and in the rearing and care of her nine children no mother could have been more loving and patient and tireless. She was and is a Christian woman, God-fearing and pious, and all the higher instincts of her soul she has ever labored to transmit to and inculcate in her children.

There is perhaps no sweeter picture of maternity than is presented in those portraits of the young queen in which she is represented with her young child in her arms. She was a queen, but greater than a queen—a monarch, and so much more—a mother!

Ah, there were happy days for the quiet, home-loving queen! But they were short days, and they hurried by and brought widowhood and a lasting grief to one of the most faithful of all wives. The good prince received the summons which no man can evade, and died as he had lived—his great soul divided between Germany and England. Music was his comfort to the last, and his favorite daughter,

QUEEN VICTORIA AS A MOTHER.

Princess Alice, a gentle nurse and a lovable girl, used to while away many of his hours of illness and pain by her music on the piano. As he lay dying she played in an adjoining room "Eine Feste Burg ist Unser Gott," and resting on the solemn grandeur of Luther's great hymn, with the murmuring of "Liebes Frauchen" and "Gutes Frauchen" upon his lips, the prince carried into eternity the ambition and love of the queen of England.

MOURNING FOR ALBERT.

And her mourning for him has been of no ordinary sort. There has been no ostentation about it, but it has lasted all these years, and all the world knows it was and is sincere. Her devotion to his memory is the same as was her devotion to him—unfeigned and fervent. The principal outward display of her grief was of a negative sort. She sought seclusion. It was not till 1866, fifteen years after the death of the prince consort, that she appeared at a public function. On that occasion she opened Parliament in person. Now, in her old age, she rarely attends court ceremonials, and all the purely ostentatious duties of the sovereign are relegated to the Prince and Princess of Wales. Until the jubilee year the average Englishman had few opportunities of seeing his sovereign.

QUEEN VICTORIA TODAY.

A great deal of interest naturally attaches to the personality of Queen Victoria at the present time, and there are many distinctive traits, whims and peculiarities that can only be learned by those who have had opportunities to be associated with her in her private life.

In the first place, as to her physical proportions. The tendency to increasing plumpness has been noted ever since she reached her twenty-first year. She has grown to be quite stout. She is very short of stature, her height being but four feet eleven inches. The well worn phrase, "a queenly figure," could hardly be applied to Her Majesty, although her carriage is not lacking in dignity. On ceremonial occasions she holds herself in such erect fashion that she really seems to add two or three inches to her height. As seen in profile, her features are clearly cut, though in the front view her face is plump and florid, and when in repose its expression is rather stern.

No one more regrets her fits of violent passion and spasms of temper than does the queen herself. Her efforts to overcome this constitutional disease may probably have lessened the frequency of its attacks, but they have not resulted in a cure. The very strength of the will power and stubbornness of disposition which she is known to possess, and which it might be presumed would afford her a means of resistance, only serve to augment the virulence of the paroxysms and render the task of self-control one of greater difficulty.

Intellectually the queen's pretensions are modest, though her attainments are considerable. Though she is not a brilliant woman, she cannot be said to be dull. Beyond the education that was laid down for young princesses half a century ago she has acquired a considerable range of accomplishments. She has several languages at her tongue's end, and she has latterly added Hindoostanee to her linguistic equipment, speaking it very much as the first two Georges spoke English. She has an old-fashioned taste for music of the Italian school. She likes old British ballads, especially Scotch ones, and she is well read. Her conversation, while not sparkling, is never lacking in interest, and her manner of speech is mild and agreeable.

In her home life she is most happy. She has three houses—Windsor castle, Osborne and Balmoral. Buckingham palace can hardly be called a home, for she spends little more than a week in it in the course of a year. She dislikes London and the demands that living there would make upon her. At the other places she can be more the woman and less the queen. Windsor castle is the most regal residence in Europe, but the queen stays there very little, because she wishes to avoid the ceremonials always incident to her sojourn there. But at Balmoral and Osborne she can be more at her ease.

The proud English queen, who is so punctilious and ceremonial in all her official relations, exacting the most rigorous observance of external forms from those composing her court, is nevertheless as thoroughly democratic at heart as the sovereign ruler of a great nation can possibly be.

COTTOLENE.

How to use Cottolene

the new shortening, like all other things must be rightly used if you wish the best results. Never, in any recipe, use more than two-thirds as much Cottolene as you used to use of lard. Never put Cottolene in a hot pan. Put it in when cold and heat it with the pan. Be careful not to burn Cottolene. To test it, add a drop of water; if hot enough, it will pop. Cottolene, when rightly used, delights everyone. Get the genuine, sold everywhere in tins, with trade-marks—"Cottolene" and steer's head in cotton-plant wreath—on every tin.

Curtains of Cobwebs

Are what the windows in faiiries' houses are draped with. Doubtless they are very beautiful, but we think we can offer you an improvement on them in the shape of our lace curtains. While they are as beautiful and delicate as cobwebs, with designs as pretty, they are durable and strong.

For those who are tired of lace, there are the dainty muslins. These are less expensive and just as pretty and durable.

NEW YORK YACHT CLUB.

To Rendezvous at Glen Cove August 3 for the Annual Cruise.

The third general meeting of the New York Yacht Club for the year was held at the club-house in New York last evening, Commodore Brown presiding.

Following the routine work, the question of the final passage of the amendment to chapter 4 of the by-laws, regarding "representation," was taken up. The amendment is as follows:

Add to the end of first paragraph: "Yachts complying with the foregoing conditions, except as to capacity, but having a capacity of less than fifteen tons and not less than ten tons, ascertained and certified, as herein provided, shall be entitled to representation for all purposes, except voting at meetings."

The above amendment has caused much discussion in the club. It has been held that the admission of boats having a capacity of less than fifteen tons and not less than ten tons would be of great club benefit, particularly if their owners were allowed to vote, but the latter proposition was not endorsed. Then the amendment, as above, was passed. After some discussion, the whole question was laid upon the table, which is likely to be the last of it.

The amendment as follows, to rule 1, section 3, of the racing rules, was presented and passed:

Class 4, not over 60 and over 51 feet racing length; class 5, not over 51 and over 43 feet racing length; class 6, not over 43 and over 36 feet racing length; class 7, not over 36 feet racing length.

A letter from Mr. George Gould was read, in which he acknowledged his appreciation of the action of the club in sending him the handsome trophy to commemorate the services of the Vigilant last fall.

The letter of Mr. H. Maitland Kersey, resigning from the club, was read and his resignation accepted.

The rendezvous of the fleet for the annual cruise was fixed for Glen Cove, and the date Monday, August 3.

LIEUTENANT COMMANDER STURDY'S CASE.

The San Francisco Daily Report's Yokohama correspondent writes as follows: The principal topic of talk in club circles here is the heavy sentence imposed on Lieutenant Commander Sturdy, executive officer of United States cruiser Olympia (Captain Read commanding)—suspension for two years and the loss of ten numbers. The circumstances are out of the usual, and there is an impression here that the heavy sentence of the court will be modified by the reviewing authorities.

It appears that Captain Read was on the sick list more than a month, until Friday, April 17. The executive officer of course succeeded to the temporary command of the ship, which at this time was at Woosung. On the thirteenth of April Lieutenant Commander Sturdy left the ship and went to Shanghai, the command devolving on the next officer, Lieutenant Mitchell. As commander of the ship Sturdy gave himself four days' leave, and did not return until the evening of the seventeenth. Admiral McNair sent a letter to the ship, requesting Sturdy to explain his unauthorized absence, and a very pointed reply of Sturdy to this letter was, in effect, that Sturdy admitted his absence, but stated that it was not without authority; in other words, that as commander of the Olympia he could give himself as much leave as he wanted. This letter was returned to Sturdy as unsatisfactory to the admiral, and upon his declining to make any further statement, or excuse himself in any way for what the admiral evidently considered a breach of discipline, he was placed under arrest to await trial.

RHODE ISLAND BANKS.

The comptroller of the currency gives out the following abstract of the reports of the national banks of Rhode Island on their condition May 7 last:

Lawful money reserve in bank, viz.: Gold coin, $623,828.21; gold treasury certificates, $126,-120; silver dollars, $22,809; silver treasury certificates, $260,313; silver fractional coin, $105,865 87; total specie, $1,080,054.08; legal tender notes, $720,195; United States certificates of deposit for legal tender notes, $1,820,-250 00; 5 per cent. redemption fund with treasurer, $342,657.50; due from United States treasurer, $23,379.50; total, $55,053,309.60.

Liabilities—Capital stock paid in, $19,537,-050; surplus fund, $5,198,684.88; undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid, $1,292,-300 00; national bank notes issued, $7,052,080; less amount on hand, $121,125; amount outstanding, $6,670,575; due to other national banks, $1,262,461.24; due to state banks and bankers, $1,626,590.01; dividends unpaid, $91,626.36; individual deposits, $18,639,364 10; United States deposits, $81,418.85; deposits of United States disbursing officers, $10,382.36; notes and bills rediscounted, $5,021.25; bills payable, $210,000; liabilities other than those above stated, $11,-746.37; total, $55,053,309.60; average reserve held, 25.93 per cent.

FOR THE ARMENIAN FUND.

The program for the entertainment to be given at Masonic hall this evening for the benefit of the Armenian fund is varied and will undoubtedly prove interesting. The recitations and posturings will be by persons who have made a thorough study of the art. The vocalist, Miss Mae Titus, has recently returned from Europe, where she has been studying for several months, and as this is her first public appearance since her return, many people are desirous of hearing her. The proceeds will be devoted to a worthy object.

NO DYNAMITE FIRE-CRACKERS.

An impression seems to prevail in this city that the use of fire-crackers has been forbidden by the General Assembly, but this is not the case. The Assembly did pass a law recently, forbidding the use of large crackers loaded with dynamite or any explosive other than old-fashioned gunpowder. These recent additions to the supply of noise-makers have caused many fears for the safety of the people on the street, for the so called crackers are of great strength, and exceedingly dangerous when thrown about promiscuously, as they have been. The old-fashioned powder cracker makes less noise and causes less occasion for the medical examiner's services, but it is the only kind of cracker that according to law can crack hereabouts on Election day.

THE WAITING ROOM ON COMMERCIAL WHARF.

The waiting room on Commercial wharf, attached to the Providence, Fall River and Newport Steamboat Company's office, has been metamorphosed; the accumulated dirt has been removed, a new floor laid, and the interior almost entirely renovated and disguised with paint until it looks pleasant. Mr. Smith will have charge of it, and run a lunch counter for hungry travelers. This is something that has been for years needed on the wharf, and its re establishment is but one of many signs that the new steamboat company is trying to do all it can to bring the management of the line up to the times.

FAILURE OF A PROVIDENCE FIRM.

The firm of Wood, Bicknall & Potter, wholesale and retail dealers in crockery and glassware, 359 to 369 Westminster street, Providence, last night made an assignment for the benefit of its creditors. The assignee is James M. Scott. The liabilities are reckoned at $75,000 and the nominal assets will fully equal that amount. The cause of the assignment is laid to the prevailing depression in business since 1893. The creditors are numerous and widely scattered, and little of the indebtedness, aside from that to a few banks, which are secured, is to creditors outside the city. The members of the firm are George H. Wood, F. J. Bicknall and J. H. Potter, who succeeded the firm of Warren and Wood when Mr. Warren retired some years ago.

"THE LIBERTY BELL."

Next Tuesday night, at the Boston Theatre, will be presented an opera entitled "The Liberty Bell," the music of which was composed by Julius Adler and the libretto written by William Carter. Two car-loads of scenery will be used, and the costumes and paraphernalia will be appropriate to the scenes and times illustrated. The scenes of the play, which take place during the Revolution of 1776, are laid in Boston and Philadelphia. The first act shows a reproduction of Griffin's wharf, the schooner and the general surroundings, and a picture is given at the finale of the famous "Boston Tea Party." The second act discloses the interior of the fortifications on Breed's hill (popularly known as Bunker hill), showing in the distance Boston harbor and the assembled fleet. The last act is the exterior of Independence Hall in Philadelphia, and at the end of the play a transparency in the background reveals the signing of the Declaration of Independence, with all the original characters reproduced as they were in life. The company, which numbers one hundred and fifty persons, has been selected from among the very best artists in America.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

—Commodore Wallace is on a short visit to New York.

—Letter Carrier J. A. Carr has returned from his vacation.

—Miss Simms of Boston is guest of Mrs. Charles M. Cottrell.

—Mr. Henry A. C. Taylor of New York has joined his family here.

—Mrs. Charles Morgan has joined her parents at Erie, Penn.

—Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Bryce are at the Muenchinger-King cottage.

—The flag of the Red Men is at half-mast for the late William P. Lyon.

—Mrs. H. A. Johnson will arrive at the Eustis cottage on Gibbs avenue May 26.

—Nearly all the stands on Washington square have been rented for Election day.

—Mr. Nelson G. Green of New York will arrive at the C. C. Baldwin villa tomorrow.

—Mrs. John La Farge has returned from New York and is at her cottage on Sunnyside Place.

—Captain and Mrs. H. B. Ryder of Dennisport, Mass., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Perry.

—There will be service in Trinity Church Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, with a sermon for children.

—Three large goldfish, one weighing fully a pound and a half, have been placed in the basin of the flowing fountain on the Mall.

—Mr. Bassett represented Mr. Honey in the hearing in Providence yesterday on the Bachelder case, Mr. Honey being engaged on another case in this city.

—Invitations are out for the wedding reception of Miss Mary Rogers Clarke and Mr. George Saunders Stoddard, Wednesday, June 3, at 12:30 o'clock, at the residence of Mrs. Lydia W. Clarke, 299 Spring street. The wedding will take place at noon.

—Yesterday tug Aquidneck towed schooner Ira Laffrienier from City wharf, where she wintered, to Spring wharf, where the schooner was grounded to allow the hull to be cleaned.

—The second match rifle shoot by the Artillery and Naval Reserve companies will be shot this evening at both ranges, beginning at the Reserves' armory range at 7:30 o'clock.

—Mr. John O. Rogers has secured a position as clerk with Mr. Warren F. Leland at the Windsor Hotel, New York. Mrs. Rogers is making a short visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Titus.

—Captain Harry Maitland has arrived from Osterville, Mass., with his new pleasure cat-boat. She is a good-looking, large and commodious craft, 27 feet over all, 24 feet on the water line, and 12 feet beam.

—Mr. Charles P. Scott, formerly of this city but now organist at the Winter Hill Church, Dorchester, has just written a new song, entitled "Slumberland," which Mr. A. P. Crandall has on sale at his music store.

—Yesterday Crowley launched five craft at one time from one way. They were sloop yacht Minerva, two naphtha launches, Mr. Agassiz's steam launch Squid and Mr. Moran's cat yawl Pelican. Today Mr. Emmons's cat yawl Gannett was launched for the season.

—Rev. J. B. Jordan of Worcester will preach at the First Presbyterian Church Sunday morning and evening, and at Grace Chapel in the afternoon. For half an hour before the evening service Mr. G. Everett Hill, organist of St. George's Church, will give an organ recital.

—It is understood that Adjutant General Sackett and the officers of the new Providence Naval Reserve company will shortly visit this city, to witness an exhibition of "arm and away boats" and other drill by the local company of salts, who have become quite proficient in this line.

—It is understood that but two of the boat crews entered for the Naval Reserve race in the Decoration day regatta on the Harlem river will start, the Newport and the New York crews. The local crew is putting in some good practice, but their comrades would feel better if they did better.

—Colonel Barker has received word from Adjutant General Sackett that the Bristol Naval Reserves and Company F, First Rhode Island regiment, of Wakefield, will participate in the Election day parade. Company F is a new military organization, formed within the past year, and is likely to make a good showing.

—John A. Norman has sold to Elizabeth Douglass a lot of land bounded easterly, 25 feet, on Marchant street; northerly, 121 feet, on other land of the grantor; westerly, 10 feet, on a proposed street; southerly, 40 feet, and westerly, 15 feet, on land of the grantee, and southerly, 81 feet, on land about to be conveyed to John Dowd.

—Last evening the Young People's Society of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, which was organized about two or three years ago as an independent society, voted to become a chapter of the Epworth League, the general young people's society of the Methodist church. Arrangements for completing the change of relations will be made later.

—The rain that fell so easily, and on the whole so plentifully, all day yesterday caused a postponement of many ball games, stopped the bicyclists and did some other things, but it gave vegetation a great boom, and wet the parched earth as it had for weeks been waiting to be wet. The growing plants have increased in size so fast since yesterday that one can almost imagine he sees them growing.

DENTISTS.

E. P. ROBINSON, D.D.S., 102 Touro St., announces that by the expiration of the time for which it was made the association in practice between himself and Dr. Brackett terminated April 30, 1896. From that date Dr. Robinson conducts an independent practice at the same address as before.

THE STUART PORTRAIT OF WASHINGTON.

Artist Church has returned the Stuart portrait of Washington to its position in the senate chamber at the State House. The picture and frame look like new, and cause the chamber to look even more dilapidated than ever. The portrait has been in Providence two or three weeks for renovation, as provided by act of the legislature some time since. Both frame and picture were in sad need of attention. Mr. Church had positive orders from the secretary of state not to re-touch the face or other parts, except where the canvas was torn or the paint cracking off. Had it not been for these instructions the artist would have restored to its original value some of the coloring which has faded with the lapse of time and the lack of proper care. As it is, the picture reflects credit upon its renovator, while the massive frame, which heretofore has been greatly admired, has been improved a hundred per cent. Before it was all plain gilding, but now the relief work has been burnished, as has been the top piece, which is a grand cluster of war implements about the shield of the state.
